WILL THE VOTERS GET TO DECIDE?

I'd like to thank Michelle Holman and Kai Huschke for their insightful and powerful Viewpoint on Nov. 30, "Making Democracy Illegal: The increasing attacks on citizen initiative power."

It provokes some questions. What will happen with the Protect Lane County Watersheds initiative, currently being circulated for signature gathering? Will it be successful in getting to the ballot? Will it get the votes needed to make it into law? Will that law be contested in court? Our water and community would be well served by the proposed protections in this initiative. Let's give it our best, Lane County! See ProtectLaneCountyWatersheds.org.

YET ANOTHER LAWLESS TIMBER GRAB

The Warner Creek road blockade — declared the "Cascadia Free State" — in 1995-96 was a coalescing of a deep ecological resistance movement brought about by then-President Bill Clinton's enactment of the lawless Logging Rider in 1995 to log and clearcut million acres of our national forests. Road blockades and tree sits against Clinton's lawless timber grab proceeded for 10 more years.

Twenty-eight years forward, President Joe Biden and the U.S. Forest Service have enacted a new "Lawless Logging Timber Grab" upon 45 million acres of national forests across the country using the Orwellian guise of "wildfire risk reduction" and "restoration" to again log and clearcut our last ancient forests. The provisions were snuck into the Infrastructure Act of 2021. If allowed to proceed, this new timber grab upon our national forests will release an estimated 4 gigatons of carbon equivalent by 2030, which would completely wipe out any gains the Biden administration has enacted against climate upheaval.

Will the people of Cascadia and beyond defend their homeland and biosphere by beating back Biden's lawless timber grab like citizens did from 1995 to 2000? Defending and preserving our last ancient forests will create real gains in curtailing the looming ecological and climate collapse.

NO PUBLIC BAILOUT FOR MLB MILLIONAIRES

Let me get this straight: Our local minor league baseball team would like hefty contributions from local, county, state and even federal taxpayers to build a $100 million stadium right next to an established residential neighborhood.

The story we're told is that Major League Baseball (MLB) will not pay for the stadium; if we want a team here we need to foot the bill.

Well, here's what MLB recently announced they will pay for: a $700 million, 10-year contract for a player named Shohei Ohtani. This means that, averaged over the 10 years, this person gets $70 million a year, $5.8 million a month, $1.3 million a week, $192,000 a day. And that's just one player! Yet they ask us to pay for a stadium. I find that insulting.

I look forward to voting no on any ballot measure asking for stadium funds.

THE U.S. STANDS ALONE IN OPPOSING A CEASE-FIRE

What keeps me up at night is all the children buried alive under the rubble in Gaza. They live right now, trapped in utter terror and desperation, waiting for rescue. Right now they cry, hoping someone will hear them. This is the fate of dozens, maybe hundreds, of Palestinians.

Our country stands alone in its vote to continue the violence. The hypocrisy of our veto against a global consensus for cease fire is plain for all to see. Whatever tenuous lie we feed ourselves in the isolation of the American perspective will bear only poison fruit. Until one day we may find our own children screaming in the darkness under the rubble, and wonder how the world can sleep at night knowing of such injustice.

I can no longer sleep soundly as an American. Not because of some privileged self interest for my own kin and country, but because nothing could ever persuade me to set aside empathy for any child suffering alone in darkness. All the world, save our narrow Anglo-Israeli alliance, acknowledges that same human empathy. This is the line in the sand which all of conscience should rush to find themselves on the right side of. It's the right side of history, which opposes selfish and short-sighted political interests that any free people should turn their backs on. I turn my back on this America, and I pray we can look our own children in the eye if we allow the totality of this genocide to unfold.

THANKS FOR GIVING US AN OPINION FORUM

As the year comes to a close, I want to thank Eugene Weekly for the incredible opinion forum they provide for our letters. Current opinions include the conflict in Gaza, the mayoral campaign, health care, the need for the astrology column.

Many of us learn from the points of view of others, on national issues like renewing the expanded Child Tax Credit, local issues like elections, global issues like the End TB Now Act and conflicts like Gaza. And this is just one aspect of a very informative and entertaining local paper. Let's continue to share our ideas and speak up in response to others, this supports the paper and our democracy!

FOCUS ON KINDNESS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

With so much fear, chaos, wars and hateful voices, my sense of sadness turned to hope as I once again watched It's a Wonderful Life, seeing George Bailey, in his darkest hour, rescued by his neighbors and singing "We'll take a cup of kindness yet for Auld Lang Syne."

I can choose kindness instead of complaining or shutting others out of my life. I have my wonderful neighborhood, where we come from different countries and backgrounds but care for each other through thick and thin. My UMC faith community has "Open Hearts, Open Doors." Health Care for All Oregon is leading the way to a simplified health care system with everybody in and nobody out. I can work with these folks and groups that are seeking peace, justice, hope and health for all, thus not contributing to the anger, hate and sadness in our country and world.

As a 94-year-old retired nurse, I am hopeful that we'll all share cups of kindness as our gift to family, friends and even with those we may not agree with this holiday season.

The single biggest step Oregon can take to COMBAT the CLIMATE EMERGENCY is to REFORM our outdated FOREST MANAGEMENT LAWS.

HERE'S HOW:

- ★ Reduce clearcutting
- ★ Permanently protect Old Growth Forests
- ★ Increase stream buffer zones to protect drinking water and fish
- ★ Encourage forest restoration on public lands

Insecurity Measures

THE HULT CENTER AND TWO OTHER EUGENE MUSIC VENUES USE SCANNERS FROM A COMPANY UNDER FIRE FOR LETTING WEAPONS SLIP BY IN SCHOOLS

By Emma J Nelson

In October, Eugene's Hult Center for the Performing Arts leased AI-powered security scanners for $170,000 a year to "ensure a secure environment." However, the Massachusetts corporation that created the magnetometers, Evolv Technology, is now under investigation by the Federal Trade Commission for allegedly misrepresenting its product's capabilities.

Internet Protocol Video Market, a research group that analyzes security and surveillance technology, found in December 2022 that Evolv had paid the National Center for Spectator Sports Safety and Security, a government-funded academic center, an estimated $20,000 to doctor the results on its product testing.

When asked if he was aware of the FTC's investigation or IPVM's report before leasing the devices on Aug. 30, Hult Center General Manager Jeff Weinkauf said he wasn't.

"In our research, we noted that Evolv was widely used by facilities doing similar work and came highly recommended by those groups," Weinkauf says. "One of the most attractive elements was that the system could support ingress of large crowds in a short time which met our goal of limiting impact on our attendees."

According to Weinkauf, he was able to see how Evolv operates at the Cuthbert Amphitheater. Both the Cuthbert and the McDonald Theatre also use Evolv magnetometers.

IPVM found in its Dec. 6, 2022, report that NCS4 allowed Evolv "to set evaluation criteria, extensively redline the final released report and cover up testing failures in its weapons detection system used in schools, museums, theme parks, stadiums and other venues across the U.S."

According to a May article in The Intercept, the Utica School District in New York installed Evolv Technology scanners in 13 schools. School authorities noted that the magnetometers, which the district spent $4 million on, have allowed knives and a police officer's revolver through without flagging them. One student was able to carry a knife past the scanners on Oct. 31, 2022, and stabbed a fellow student.

Although there was no one incident that inspired the use of the security scanners at the Hult Center, Weinkauf says, "Having a plan that is just based around hope and the goodwill of people in our area is not enough."

Weinkauf says he worries about large gathering spaces such as performing arts centers being considered "softer targets," and he hopes that recent security upgrades can mitigate this danger.

"People place a lot of trust in us when they come here," Weinkauf says. "We just want to make sure that we're as safe as possible, that we're doing our due diligence to provide a safe place for everyone."

When something is flagged by the magnetometers, the patron is asked to visit the resolution table where they can be manually checked for weapons or prohibited paraphernalia. Thus far, Weinkauf says, the Evolv scanners have stopped off-duty police officers carrying firearms and some people with forgotten pocket knives. Weinkauf says that the Hult Center team is able to limit wait time at the resolution table to under a minute, especially when the system flags a false positive.

"Evolv was never presented to us as a single solution to all of our screening needs," Weinkauf says. "Additionally, we use Evolv in a multi-layered approach and do not rely solely on its technology to secure our facility."

In addition to installing Evolv scanners, the Hult Center has also upgraded from its previous 12 security cameras to more than 40 HD cameras placed internally and externally, Weinkauf says.

"The posture is not 'We're watching you,'" he says. "It's more 'We want to provide a space where people can feel completely welcome and as safe as possible, within reason, to come and have great experiences.'"

Weinkauf says that, as of now, he and the Hult Center are comfortable with the use of Evolv.

"I would absolutely be looking into any of those allegations," he says. "We would do our due diligence and follow up." ■

HAPPENING PEOPLE

By Paul Neevel

Riley Derrick

"I've always been the class clown," Riley Derrick says. "The people I modeled were David Letterman and Bill Murray. I stayed up late in middle school to see them." A seventh-generation Oregonian whose ancestors arrived by covered wagon, Derrick was a bat boy for the Eugene Emeralds while in middle school, and his first paid job, at age 15, was in Farrell's Ice Cream Parlour. After graduation from Churchill High School, he found a job at the local Costco Wholesale Warehouse. "I've worked there for 23 years," he recounts. "I started out at the gas station, then moved through electronics and the photo lab. I did printing in the photo lab and wound up talking with people about weddings and funerals. The most rewarding part of the work was trying to help people." He went on to supervise the Costco front end, where the registers are, and he writes the schedule for all the front end employees. "I'm a fan of David McCullough," Derrick says. "He's the author of John Adams and Truman. I went to hear him speak, and he talked about how important it is to share what you love. It's become a mantra to me." In 2019, Derrick began to assemble art installations in his personal staff locker, a small 9x12-inch box among many others on the wall of a long hallway from the registers to the restrooms. "I started putting pictures in it, photos of my dad, toys from my childhood, stuff that made me happy," he notes. "When I showed it to people, they flipped out. Now I leave it open, even when I'm not there. I've done around 10 different lockers: always a Christmas locker, sometimes a Halloween locker. My original childhood locker remains up five or six months at a time." Over the years, Derrick has designed and built a lot of office decor, front yard decor and kids bedroom decor. In the photograph, he shows off one of his creative endeavors, a cutout of Punxsutawney Phil, constructed for a Groundhog Day party. "I love Groundhog Day," he explains, "and I wanted to share that with my family and friends."

• Enjoy this week's Give Guide and the Winter Solstice and ponder all that is good in the world. Also ponder how much you love *Eugene Weekly because, as of now, this will be our last print issue until after the New Year.

But find us online at EugeneWeekly.com and get your fill of news and snark in our Tuesday and Thursday email newsletters, which you can sign up for at EugeneWeekly.com/newsletter.

• The city of Eugene reports that there were more than 220,000 scooter rides in the first eight months of the year-long e-scooter pilot program. The city also reports that you e-scooter-haters will be happy to hear that the program is no more. Locally, the scooters were administered by Cascadia Mobility, but Superpedestrian — which operates in 60 cities across the globe, owns the scooters and the software used to run the program — has shut down for "financial reasons."

• It's nice that Gov. Tina Kotek finally made it to Lane County on the final stop of her not-quite-whirlwind around-the-state listening tour. We hope she enjoyed the visit — but we also hope she comes back real soon. As the more rural parts of the state have complained, Oregon isn't just Portland and Salem, and those of us living in the southern end of the Willamette Valley wouldn't mind a little more attention now and then.

• The new Eugene YMCA's ribbon cutting and open house was Saturday, Dec. 15. Welcoming hundreds of folks to the fancy new athletic digs were several local muralists whose art decorate the Y's walls — Esteban Camacho Steffensen, Ila Rose, Liza Mana Burns, Nick Rusnock and Eugene Weekly's own Chelsea Lovejoy.

• Correction: Rep. Val Hoyle's communications director disputes a claim made in a letter to the editor published Dec. 14 that Hoyle "slunk off around the corner" to avoid demonstrators against the Israeli war in Gaza at her congressional office. The demonstration was at Hoyle's Eugene office, says Hoyle staffer Shamma Matalbert, and Hoyle was at her D.C. office that day. Letter writer Susan Shafrroth responds, "I am fine if you want to remove that part of my letter, as the part about funding the military over the homeless man in front of her office is by far more important to me."

• In this week's keeping tabs on the New York Times, the Dec. 18 story headlined "How College Football Is Clobbering Housing Markets Across the Country" raised our eyebrows as we hear tales of students and fixed income folks struggling to afford housing in Eugene. The NYT writes that around the U.S., "in small cities reliant on college sports to keep their economies humming, short-term rentals are destabilizing housing markets, fueled by wealthy fans and investors who transform single-family homes into de facto hotels for a few weeks out of the year, and often leave them sitting empty the rest of the time." Huh.

"From KLCC to The Register-Guard to the little red boxes of Eugene Weekly, the community needs news sources. Whether it's a subscription to a daily paper, a contribution to public radio or supporting EW's efforts to put out a paper for the past 40 or so years, support your local news source." — Camilla Mortensen, Eugene Weekly editor

Helping those in need

Burrito Brigade

541-556-5051 or 541-632-3239, info@burritobrigade.org.

"I have watched them grow from some Whiteaker folks making vegan burritos for the unhoused in 2013 into a group making 500 to 700 burritos every weekend, establishing 55 free little pantries hosted in neighborhoods across Eugene-Springfield and running a free grocery store stocked with rescued and donated food serving 1,200 families per month." — Chris Calise, volunteer

Community Supported Shelters

1160 Grant Street, Eugene, OR 97402. 541-683-0836. CommunitySupportedShelters.org.

"I believe in CSS because they do so much that helps the unhoused obtain housing, jobs, food and whatever other support they need." — Devin Sharp, volunteer

Lane County Diaper Bank

5729 Main Street #176, Springfield, OR 97478. 541-221-0824. LCDiaperBank.org.

"Lane County Diaper Bank gives back to the most vulnerable demographic. The only way to improve our society's future is to pour as many resources as we can into our youths. Here at the Diaper Bank we make this our mission every day." — Melody Pittman, volunteer

Ophelia's Place

1577 Pearl Street, Suite 100, Eugene, OR 97401; 1497 Kalmia Street, Junction City, OR 97448; 104 SE 4th Avenue, Albany, OR 97321. 541-284-4333. OpheliasPlace.net.

"My 5th grader's school counselor highly recommended Ophelia's Place to us. I've benefited tremendously from their parenting workshops and family counseling. My daughter loves the after-school program and camps for the diverse and welcoming atmosphere. She's learned helpful coping strategies in counseling: once grumpy and anxious, she's regained her joy." — Shanna Gazley, Ophelia's Place parent

PrayBig! Food Pantry

4110 N. River Road, Eugene, OR 97404. 541-689-4010.

"Once a month the pantry is open to everyone to fill a box of food and clothing. Although a project for 11 years at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, it is a non-denominational project open to all. The pantry has zero administrative costs with total staffing of volunteers." — Mike Fassel, volunteer

ShelterCare

499 W. 4th Avenue, Eugene, OR 97401. 541-686-1262. ShelterCare.org.

"During a time of immense need, ShelterCare has the experience, expertise and local involvement with the community that allows it to make an impact. Their wide-reaching services do an amazing job of tailoring themselves to the disparate housing and behavioral health assistance that members of our community need." — Jesse Elconin, ShelterCare board member, co-founder & principal broker of Duo Property Group

Whiteaker Community Council

PO Box 11692, Eugene, OR 97440. Whiteakercommunitycouncil@gmail.com. WhiteakerCommunityCouncil.com.

"City of Eugene Emergency Management understands the need for community emergency preparedness education. WCC efforts increase capacity for vulnerable populations to prepare for, respond to and recover from crises. Without support of community leaders like WCC, it's nearly impossible to prepare each neighborhood for emergencies our community can expect." — Sierra Anderson, city of Eugene emergency manager

Education

Parker Learning Gardens

31239 Lanes Turn Road, Eugene, OR 97408. ParkerLearningGardens.org.

"Parker Learning Gardens provides a vital opportunity for children from toddlers through high school to connect with nature and where food comes from. The organization fosters a sense of wonder and a love of science while instilling in them the value of community. It's a worthy cause for any nature-lover to support." — Hope Zima, volunteer

SMART Reading

PO Box 1378, Springfield, OR 97477. 541-600-8035. SMARTReading.org.

"I have worked closely with the SMART Reading Program in three of our elementary schools. I have personally witnessed SMART readers make connections with students over the love of books every week. The dedication of the SMART volunteers goes way beyond reading to individuals or classes of students." — Carissa Boyce, Title I coordinator, Eugene School District 4J

Environment

Beyond Toxics

120 Shelton McMurphy Blvd., Ste #280, Eugene, OR 97401. 541-465-8860. BeyondToxics.org.

"Beyond Toxics made a program available to get us (Bethel residents) free air purifiers. It was nice to see an immediate impact. You can really sense the unity and passion they bring into their work." — Kyle Meyer, west Eugene resident facing soil remediation due to dioxin contamination from J.H. Baxter Co.

Cascadia Wildlands

PO Box 10455, Eugene, OR 97440. 541-434-1463. CascadiaWild.org.

"Cascadia Wildlands works overtime to keep our precious waters safeguarded, big trees standing and unique species persisting in our special region. These are important values for Ninkasi, and we hope you can join us in supporting this outstanding organization." — Jamie Floyd and Nikos Ridge, Ninkasi Brewing Company co-founders

Better Eugene-Springfield Transportation (BEST)

PO Box 773, Eugene, OR 97401. 541-343-5201. BestOregon.org.

"I have admired BEST's efforts to share information about city and regional plans that affect everyone's transportation needs in the community. It's clear BEST seeks all possible information and then interprets and publishes their findings with highlights and careful opinions. We need their voice, along with everyone's individual contribution." — Steve Bade

Breach Collective

PO Box 5291, Eugene, OR 97405. 541-632-4044.

"Breach has brought policy and technical expertise to critical questions facing our community to address climate change and the transition to clean renewable electricity. As a nonprofit executive director myself, I have been impressed by their collective passion, efficiency and ability to work collaboratively to effect change." — Lyndsie Leech, executive director of WellMama and Eugene city councilor

Community Veterinary Center

470 Hwy 99N, Eugene, OR 97402. 541-636-3244. CommunityVet.org.

"CVC offers affordable comprehensive veterinary care adjusted to meet my income. For me, my Yorkie-Poo is simply everything. Daisy was diagnosed with luxating patella and needed both knees replaced. I received an estimate of $14,000. I talked with the Community Veterinary Center and, taking into account my income, Daisy had both knees replaced for $2,400. CVC makes me feel heard and respected." — Heather Ford, Daisy's human

Greenhill Humane Society

88530 Green Hill Road, Eugene, OR 97402. 541-689-1503. Green-Hill.org.

"I'm awed by the work Greenhill Humane Society's staffers and volunteers do for our community. In addition to finding homes for animals, they step up during natural disasters, work to resolve emergency situations such as hoarding and abuse, and connect people in crisis to other resources. Such a vital organization!" — Leigh Anne Jascheway, Greenhill volunteer

Pro-Bone-O

POBox 1823, Eugene, OR 97440. 541-799-0441. ProBoneO.org.

"For our unhoused neighbors, pets provide love, security and a sense of purpose. If you have a pet companion you cherish, please consider honoring that relationship by supporting Pro-Bone-O in their mission to provide free veterinary care, food, and supplies for the pets of people experiencing homelessness in Lane County." — Amanda Donofrio, supporter

Welcome Home Animal Sanctuary

82940 Hurlburt Lane, Creswell, OR 97426. 541-870-9952. WelcomeHomeSanctuary.com.

"At Welcome Home Animal Sanctuary, previously abused and neglected farm animals have a loving forever home. Visitors can meet the animals with their unique personalities and learn their stories. Thus, the rescued animals heal and transform the lives of people who hear their messages of hope and compassion." — Nicole Jendro, supporter

Back2Youth

28992 Summerville Road, Eugene, OR 97405. 541-515-8295. Back2Youth.org.

"Niles Mittasch moved back to Eugene specifically to create/launch Back2Youth from his hometown, the very town/commUNITY that had elevated and embraced him while he was growing up. Back2Youth is his way to give back that upliftment and carry it forward through sharing his love of the outdoors, as well as, teaching about mindfulness, self care and resiliency, so today's youth would have foundational skills that would last them a lifetime and remind them just how valuable and powerful they are." — Kellee Ratzlaff, graphic designer

The storyline and characters are well known. There is the "Party Scene," "The Transformation," "The Battle Scene" and the "Snow Scene." And that's just Act I. In your mind's eye, from your seat inside the Hult Center's Silva Concert Hall, you might anticipate every move of Clara, the Prince, the Sugar Plum Fairy and the Mouse King with his mischievous army of mice. Add to it the mesmerizing music of Pyotr Tchaikovsky, as performed live by OrchestraNext, and The Nutcracker is a wonderful family-oriented event. Eugene Ballet brings the story to life starting Dec. 21. Is it all a Christmas Eve dream? Are there really dancing characters such as Spanish Chocolate, Arabian Coffee, Chinese Tea and French Marzipan? Let your imagination roam and the magic take you for a ride at any of Eugene Ballet's seven performances.

Eugene Ballet's production of The Nutcracker is 7:30pm Dec. 21, Dec. 22, Dec. 23 and Dec. 26. Matinee performances are 2pm Dec. 23, Dec. 24 and Dec. 26. All performances are at the Hult Center's Silva Concert Hall. Tickets are $15 to $65. — Dan Buckwalter

Nothing says the night after the night after Christmas like EDM! It's a brand of electronic dance music that over the course of nearly 30 years has been influenced by the corrupt politics and the tattered social fabric of our times, challenging gun ownership and war, just to name two items. Now, Thievery Corporation — the duo of Rob Garza and Eric Hilton, based in Washington, D.C. — makes a stop at McDonald Theatre to amplify its message of inclusiveness over division. Garza and Hilton forged their relationship in the mid-1990s over a mutual love for club life as well as dub, bossa nova and jazz records. In 2017, they even recorded a Jamaican-themed album The Temple of I & I. As Jose Solis noted at the time in PopMatters, "Their politics, however, go beyond partisanship and focus on issues that affect the whole world, making it ironic and wildly subversive to hear their music sometimes played in decadent lounges and luxury clothing shops, their potent messages disguised under their sophisticated beats."

Thievery Corporation, with support from rock trio City of the Sun, performs at 8 pm Wednesday, Dec. 27, at McDonald Theatre, 1010 Willamette St. Tickets are $46.50 to $71.50. If general admission tickets remain on Dec. 27, they will be $51.50 and available at the McDonald Theatre box office. — Dan Buckwalter

Meet Ruger, a 2-year-old German Shepherd! He is a goofy pup looking for a home that will give him lots of exercise and spend quality time with him. He loves to play fetch and is very food motivated. His new family will need to supply a basket of toys and plenty of balls for him to be happy! He is an adventure seeker and would thrive in an outgoing family that is looking to add a dog on their outings! His perfect day would be a nice long hike followed by couch cuddles. He is a loyal dog who would make a wonderful forever buddy. Due to his high energy, he is looking for a home with lots of space to run. He has prior history chasing livestock and being around other dogs. He has seemed uninterested in other animals at the shelter and we suggest he start out as the only pet in the home. He is 2-years-old, weighs about 70 lbs., is neutered, microchipped, and up to date on vaccines. We would love to see Ruger find his home in time for the holidays so his adoption fee has been reduced to $50. With a loving family and a little manners training, Ruger will be the best dog ever!

From Tobacco Tactics to Gaslighting Exposing NW Natural's Misinformation Playbook

Regionally, gas utilities are using 'tobacco tactics' to avoid regulation. What do these tactics involve? Scholars have categorized the tobacco industry's three tactics as:

1. information management - creating and disseminating industry-friendly evidence while attacking public health evidence¹;
2. reputation management - rehabilitating the reputation of the industry while attacking public health advocates, researchers and organizations;
3. coalition management - build an industry coalition while fragmenting the opposing coalition.

The tobacco industry pioneered the use of these tactics, deploying them in different combinations and contexts. Tobacco industry messaging was most dangerous when used simultaneously with a plethora of seemingly neutral or independent front groups.

The success of these tactics in delaying and watering-down regulation came at the expense of consumers' health and wellbeing. Moreover, the tobacco industry often focused its messaging on ethnic and cultural minorities, people of lower socioeconomic status, people with language barriers, socially isolated or socially ostracized groups like the LGBTQIA+ community, people of lower educational achievement and lower healthcare literacy, as well as those traumatized by the healthcare industry and/or already suffering from medical or institutional mistrust.

For example, the Public Health Law Center at the Mitchell Hamline School of Law found that tobacco companies introduced menthol cigarettes originally as a way to "make cigarettes appear less harsh and more appealing to new smokers and young people, as well as older smokers," then later aggressively targeted menthol cigarette advertising towards African Americans, even as evidence has emerged that "people who smoke menthol cigarettes have more difficulty quitting than those who smoke non-mentholated cigarettes, and are less likely to quit successfully, despite numerous intentions to quit and quit attempts."² This is not ancient history: the tobacco industry continues today to aggressively oppose local and federal regulations curtailing menthol cigarettes and other flavored tobacco products.³

While pioneered by the tobacco industry, these tactics have become the standard playbook for any industry seeking to stall, prevent or roll-back regulation of its product.

As we have seen in Eugene, NW Natural is now openly using these tactics in response to local efforts to regulate gas in new buildings and the growing public awareness of the health concerns associated with gas use in the home. With respect to information management, recent reporting by NPR and the Climate Investigations Center demonstrated that the wider gas industry has known since the 1970s that nitrogen oxides (NOx) emissions from gas stoves in the home heighten the risk of asthma and other respiratory illnesses. In response, the industry covertly funded studies to undermine the emerging scientific basis for this knowledge. Despite these efforts, a wide body of scientific evidence now demonstrates the connection between gas use in the home, high NOx emissions levels, and respiratory illness, with one recent study calculating that more than 12% of childhood asthma cases nationwide can be attributed to gas stove pollution.⁴ Yet, NW Natural has continued to double-down on denying this science, insisting that the air quality concerns with gas stoves are the same as electric stoves (they aren't – electric stoves don't emit NOx), and that ventilation is the determining factor in indoor air quality (studies have shown that it isn't). Worse still, NW Natural has hired the consulting firm Gradient Corp., whose previous clients include – you guessed it – Big Tobacco, to produce industry-friendly analyses and give testimony at public hearings.⁵

Study

NW Natural has also engaged in reputation management by touting their aspirations to become a net-zero emissions gas utility transporting "renewable molecules underground" including expenditure of more than $100,000 to develop a school curriculum propagandizing the benefits of "renewable natural" gas. In reality, NW Natural's own disclosures show that its renewable natural gas procurement is way behind its own internal goals and failing to keep pace with its growing gas supply in Oregon, amounting to only 0.15% of its energy supply in 2022. More broadly, the gas industry has paid celebrity chefs to tout the benefits of gas stoves on social media, even as some of the world's most famous restaurants and chefs are switching to induction.

NW Natural has aggressively engaged in coalition management tactics. This includes its funding and other forms of support for a number of local and regional front groups, such as "Eugene Residents for Energy Choice," which received over $1 million (over 99.9% of its funding from NW Natural. Speaking of "choice," gas utilities' emphasis on individual choice and responsibility bears a striking resemblance to tobacco industry rhetoric around second-hand smoke.⁶ This framing ignores the wider public health issues associated with gas use up and down the pipeline, including fracking, methane leaks and outdoor NOx pollution from venting. Furthermore, NW Natural and the wider gas industry have sought to drive a wedge between supporters of climate action, particularly around so-called "renewable" natural gas and hydrogen development.

Eugenians have a reputation for being health-conscious and should see these tactics for what they are as the body of evidence exposing gas industry misinformation continues to grow. In a new study, Fumes in Focus: Visualizing air pollution from gas stoves, local non-profit Beyond Toxics provides data analysis and a shocking short documentary showing camera footage of the gas emissions from stoves in Eugene homes. On December 11, 2023, dozens of Oregon organizations and elected officials wrote to the Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum, calling for an investigation into NW Natural's unscrupulous tactics.
